John N. Davis, 9/26/12: In 2012, Republicans will win the Senate majority because they have seized the decided advantage jealously guarded by Democrats since the 19th Century. First, the state GOP is united behind savvy political warfare leaders at a time when the Democratic Party is divided by scandal and weak leadership. Second, Republicans have the favorable district maps and fundraising advantages historically reserved for Democrats. These political advantages ... money, maps, unity and savvy leaders ... have allowed Democrats to maintain their iron-fisted grip on the state budget for a hundred years. Now, with great deference to the fundamentals for winning campaigns and the standards for political fairness established by the North Carolina Democratic Party, the GOP is setting itself on a sure course for a Republican majority in the Senate for many elections to come.

Winner: Has no opposition.
Likely Winner: Has a decided advantage (highly partisan district and major financial edge).
Favored: Has an advantage but also has a competitive opponent and/or district.
Toss-up: Competitive district with two equally competitive contenders.
Yellow Highlight: Election results were different from the last forecast on September 26, 2012.
